Urban Land Institute

UrbanPlan for City of San Jose Public Officials Workshop

UrbanPlan for Public Officials is a national program of the Urban Land Institute and is designed for local decision makers who want to learn more about the forces that shape and affect the built environment and reinforces the important role they play in the real estate development process. Workshop participants will “compete” on development teams to respond to a hypothetical Request for Proposals (RFP) for the redevelopment of a site in a fictitious town. ULI members serve as facilitators challenging the conceptual proposal, act as a selection committee to review the final proposals, and present a case study to spur discussion and analysis. Workshop team participants were invited to participate. The public is invited to attend, observe, and comment.
