

Page Content Guidelines

When designing your page, ask: What is the goal of your content?

For example, do you want to help residents:

- Become more aware of a program or service? [e.g. Browse our programs]
- Complete a specific task? [e.g. Fill out a form, Schedule appointment]

What key questions are you answering for your audience?

Prioritize content by what is most essential and what isn't

- Your most critical content is your primary content. It is essential to answering your audience's questions.
- Highlight primary content in call-to-actions and action-oriented headings.
- Avoid hiding primary content behind accordions. (Remember, content relevance trumps page length.)

Standardizing design & using existing design patterns helps both users & webmasters

- Users experience less cognitive strain.
- Users (a.k.a., the public) perceives the City as one monolith. They don't know (or care) what City department they are dealing with so consistent design makes sense.
- Webmasters & designers no longer have to reinvent the wheel.
- Bonus points: easier for web publishers to maintain and improve design elements.

Use the round green buttons to link to primary content, a.k.a. 'calls to action

Use the green button for:

- Primary 'call to action' on the page.
- Maximum of 3 green buttons on the page for internal pages (landing pages can use more green buttons).
- Locate at the top of the page above the fold..

Apply Here

Secondary content is related but less essential to the main goal of your page

Use a hyperlink for:

- Secondary content that's not as essential as your primary call to action

Our bulletin How to Get a Building Permit provides an overview of the steps to getting a permit and helps you select the right service for your project. Visit our Development Services Permit Center for an overview of all permit services and hours of service.

Use the left nav for:

- Secondary content like the sub-topic of your page section.
- Under the left nav, you can include Contact Us content: Title, Phone, Email, Address, Link/Logo, Social Media.

Development Services Permit Center	CONTACT US
Building Division	Office of Councilmember Sylvia Arenas District 8
Planning Division	408-535-4908 Fax: 408-292-6469 Email
Public Works	San Jose City Hall, 18th Floor 200 East Santa Clara Street San Jose, CA 95113
Fire Permits and HazMat	Subscribe to our newsletter
Make an Appointment	Stay Connected:
Online Permits
Permit Center Hours

Supplementary content is the least critical information on your page

Use an accordion widget for supplementary information. This content is not essential to answering your audience's key question. Try keeping supplementary content to a minimum. If it doesn't help answer your audience's questions, it may be better to exclude it.

Learn About Community Center Programs

Active Adults 50+ ▾

We offer a wide range of opportunities for active adults, ages 50 and over, including Senior Nutrition and Senior Safari Walks. We also provide discounted classes and special events for our 50+ community members. You can brush up on your painting, learn how to play new games or step into new dance skills while enjoying the company of those around you.

- Learn more about our Active Adults 50+ opportunities

Fitness >

Scholarships >

SJ Digi Arts >